

Screen captures taken January 29, 2015. At this time, Carrie Freeland realized I was getting close to finding out where Trooper was, and what she did with him. To counter my search for my horse, she decided she would sue me in small claims court in retrospect, to legitimize stealing my horse, saying she was forced to confiscate him (explaining the theft). She falsely claimed I made an agreement with her to board and train my horse. If I had wanted to do that, I would have done it locally, and not with her, she is not a good horseman at all.

She knew I was broke, and she counted on me not being able to defend my innocence against her false claim in small claims court, in Chicago, IL. She also admits here, knowing I was trying to locate my horse from the health papers she submitted to travel with him across state lines, that she entered a false address for his destination.
